Dear [redacted]
\~
Thank you very much for your email and request for clarification regarding the mint marks.
\~
The mintmark is not a mandatory element to appear on a coin, but should you decide to insert it here is the rule:
\~

1. \~\~\~\~\~\~\~ If the mintmark is known, it has to be put in the design, so the Council sees it when the design is submitted for approval;

\~

2. \~\~\~\~\~\~\~ If the mintmark is not known yet because the mint producing the coin is not known yet, one can add it later. No need to go back to the Council.
   \~
3. \~\~\~\~\~\~\~ What ever the case might be, one can only use one and the same mintmark for a coin produced in a given mint and use it for all coins produced in that very mint, regardless of the denomination or year or "occasion" of the coin issue. Also, if for example, you decide to issue the Erasmus coins with a mint mark, you cannot issue some of these coins without the mintmark.

\~
I hope these clarifications help.
\~
Kind regards from Brussels,

Subject: enquiry regards €2 commemorative coin

\~
Dear [redacted]
\~
I trust that this email finds you well.
\~
We have a question regarding the issue of the common €2 commemorative coin of the 30th anniversary of the Erasmus programme. It is not clear, from the information that has been communicated to us whether it is permissible and allowed to have a mintmark on these coins or if these are not allowed. If mint marks are allowed would it be possible to have some of the coins issued without a mint mark and some with a mint mark?
\~
Thanks and regards
